4. Main output of the session

The first session of the Conference on the Future of Europe’s second European Citizens’ Panel took place at the European Parliament in Strasbourg, between 24 and 26 September 2021. The panellists were welcomed by Co-chair Gašper Dovžan, Slovenian State Secretary for EU Affairs for the Slovenian Presidency of the Council of the EU. The panel was dedicated to the overarching topic “European democracy / Values and rights, rule of law, security”. It addresses topics related

1 Disclaimer: this report is the sole responsibility of the authors and does not reflect the views of the EU Institutions to democracy, such as elections, participation outside election periods, perceived distance between people and their elected representatives, media freedom and disinformation. The Panel also deals with issues related to fundamental rights and values, the rule of law and the fight against all forms of discrimination. At the same time, the panel deals with the internal security of the EU, such as protection of Europeans from acts of terrorism and other crimes.

1. Methodology

During session 1, discussions and collective work was carried out in two formats:

- In subgroups composed of twelve to fourteen citizens. Four to five languages were spoken in each subgroup, each citizen being able to speak in his/her own language. Subgroup work was guided by professional facilitators selected by the consortium of external service providers.

- In plenary, with all participants. Plenary sessions were led by two main facilitators.

In this Panel, some adjustments were introduced to the agenda in order to take into account the learnings from the first session of Panel 1. In particular, it was decided to split the Saturday Plenary in two blocks, one on Saturday morning, and one on Saturday afternoon. This change aimed to give the panellists the possibility to fully benefit from the experts’ input and to have more time to dedicate to the Topics and Prioritization dynamics in the afternoon.

A full overview of Session 1’s phases and key moments is included in Annex I of this document.

2. Context of Session 1 in the European Citizens’ Panel process

The European Citizens’ Panels are a key feature of the Conference on the Future of Europe. Four European Citizens’ Panels are organized to allow citizens to jointly think about the future they want for the European Union.

- 4 Panels of 200 European citizens each chosen through random selection, from the 27 Member States;

- Reflecting the EU’s diversity: geographic origin (nationality and urban/rural), gender, age, socioeconomic background and level of education;

- At least one female and one male citizen per Member State is part of each Panel;
A third of each Panel is composed of young people (age 16 – 25). A special link between this youth group and the European Youth Event has been created.

Panel 1: “Stronger economy, social justice and jobs / Education, culture, youth and sport / Digital transformation”

Panel 2: “European democracy/Values and rights, rule of law, security”

Panel 3: “Climate change, environment / Health”

Panel 4: “EU in the world / Migration”

The panels shall take on board contributions gathered in the framework of the Conference through the multilingual digital platform, providing input to the Conference Plenary by formulating a set of recommendations for the Union to follow-up on.

Annex I

Overview of Session 1

Session 1: a step-by-step logic

Session 1 of all four European Citizens’ Panels consists of the following phases:

- Step 1: Sharing what the European Union means to citizens and developing visions for the future of the EU

Citizens started by discussing what the European Union currently means to them in their daily lives and how they relate to the EU before developing personal visions for the future of the EU by 2050.

- Step 2: Raising and prioritizing topics related to the Panel’s overarching topic

Using their own experiences and knowledge, as well as experts’ input, citizens identified and prioritised topics related to the Panel’s overarching topic.

In Panel 2, some adjustments were introduced to the agenda in order to take into account the learnings from the first session of Panel 1. In particular, it was decided to split the Saturday Plenary in two blocks, one on Saturday morning, and one on Saturday afternoon. This change aimed to give the panellists the possibility to fully benefit from the experts’ input and to have more time to dedicate to the Topics and Prioritization dynamics in the afternoon.

Annex II

How are the streams generated?

The “stream generation” seeks to identify work streams out of the different topics raised by the panelists in order to streamline and divide the work among the panels’ subgroups in the following panels’ sessions. It is an iterative process starting from raising different topics to adopting final work streams that was conducted in six steps by the Editorial Team with citizens approving the final work streams. The Editorial Team is composed of members of the consortium of external service providers contracted by the Commission for the organisation of the panels. The Common Secretariat of the Conference oversaw the design and the organisation of the process.

1. Topics were raised by panelists during the “Discussion of topics”, in the subgroups, and noted down by facilitators. Each citizen could raise topics that are important to her/him (within the overall topic blocks of the panel). All topics were automatically translated into English and the facilitator verified that the translation respected the meaning of the topic raised by the citizen.

2. After being consolidated, topics were prioritized in the following subgroup session. Each citizen had a maximum of 15 points that could be distributed in the order of preference. The most preferred topic was given five points, the second most preferred topic was given four points and so on. For this purpose, citizens used prioritization sheets (as anonymous ballots).

3. The facilitator counted the scores of all the topics and ranked them in order of the “topic score”, together with the citizens. The final ranking was shown on screen and transmitted to the Editorial Team.
4. The five best-ranked topics per subgroup (or more topics in case of “shared 5th ranks”) were then used for the clustering process. Across all subgroups, the Editorial Team scanned and detected which topics were similar or related to each other. Similar and related topics built clusters that were marked with a colour and/or tagged with a provisional name.

5. The next step was to allocate all those clusters into different, but coherent (maximum five) work streams. Each stream was named/titled according to the main clusters and topics assigned to this stream. The aim was to use words already raised by citizens and, therefore, to propose titles which are less technical, but more meaningful to panelists.

6. The streams were then presented as a proposal by the Editorial Team in the plenary and the subgroups. Citizens could check whether their subgroup topics had been properly considered and could ask for amendments regarding the labelling, the clustering and potential additions. If approved in the sub-groups, these amendments were then integrated into the proposed streams. In a final step, the stream distribution was presented again in the plenary and approved by acclamation. Before this final validation took place, citizens in the plenary still had the chance to make minor adjustments (also to be approved in the plenary).
